

Dr. Laura Randolph graduated from Bloomington High School in 1987 and Illinois Wesleyan University (Cum Laude) in 1992. She attended and completed her residency at Loyola University School of Medicine. Dr. Randolph completed five years of training in general surgery but pursued plastic reconstructive because of the ever-changing nature of plastics and the ability to positively impact patients. In 2006, she was bonded by the American Board of Plastic Surgery and is now in private practice in Bloomington. Dr. Randolph mentors prospective students considering the medical field and educates them on commitments to getting a good education.
